Comrades, friends, ladies and gentlemen,

Greetings! Time flies. As we are ushering in the year of 2018, I would like to extend my New Year wishes to my countrymen and women from all ethnic groups, in Hong Kong and Macao special administrative regions and in Taiwan, as well as overseas Chinese. I also wish good luck to friends from all countries and regions across the world.

It is only natural that hard work pays off, and it brings changes for the better every day. In 2017, we held the 19th National Congress of the Communist Party of China, embarking on a new journey towards the all-round building of a modern socialist China. Our national GDP reached a new level of 80 trillion yuan. Over 13 million new job opportunities were created in urban and rural areas. The social old-age pension schemes have covered more than 900 million people, while 1.35 billion people have gained access to basic medical insurance. Another more than 10 million rural residents have been lifted out of poverty. "If only I could get tens of thousands of mansions! I would house all the poor people who would then beam with smiles (ancient Chinese poet Du Fu)."

As part of our poverty alleviation efforts, 3.4 million people have moved into new and warm homes, and the goal of upgrading 6 million housing units in run-down areas has been realized in advance. The improvement of people's well-being has been accelerated, and the ecological environment has gradually improved. The people have gained a stronger sense of fulfillment, happiness and security. We are now one big step closer to the completion of a moderately prosperous society in all respects.

We have made one achievement after another in the fields of science and technology innovation as well as massive projects. The Huiyan Hard X-ray Modulation Telescope has launched into space. The C919 large passenger jet has completed its maiden flight. The quantum computer has been successfully developed. Saltwater paddies have begun trial production. The first domestically built aircraft carrier has been put into use. The Haiyi underwater glider has conducted deep-sea observations. Samples of combustible ice in sea areas have been collected successfully. The Yangshan Phase-IV Automated Port has officially opened. The main structure of the Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macao Bridge has been finished, and the Fuxing high speed trains have been operated across China … I would like to say Bravo to the great creativity demonstrated by fellow Chinese.

We held a military drill in Zhurihe training base, commemorating the 90th anniversary of the founding of the Chinese People's Liberation Army. Upon the 20th anniversary of Hong Kong's return to China, I paid a visit to it and saw with my own eyes that Hong Kong has maintained its long-term prosperity and stability with the firm support of the motherland, and it will surely enjoy a better tomorrow. In order to remember history and call for peace, we held a ceremony to mark the 80th anniversary of the War of Resistance against Japanese Aggression, as well as a national memorial service for the victims of the Nanjing Massacre.

China played host to several multilateral diplomatic events, including the first Belt and Road Forum for International Cooperation, the BRICS Summit in Xiamen, as well as the CPC in Dialogue with the World's Political Parties High-level Meeting. I also participated in some of the world's important multi-lateral meetings. In the beginning of 2017, I attended the Davos World Economic Forum and delivered a speech at the UN Headquarters in Geneva. Then I participated in other events including the G20 Summit and the APEC summit. On different occasions, I exchanged views with relevant parties, and all of us agreed to work together to build a community with a shared future for mankind, so as to benefit people all over the world.

In 2017, I received a lot of letters from the public, including villagers from Yumai Township of Longxi County in Tibet, members of a mounted cultural troupe in West Suned Prefecture of Inner Mongolia, professors of Xi'an Jiaotong University who had relocated there from eastern China decades ago, and graduates from Nankai University who had joined the army. Their stories all impressed me deeply. People have adhered to patriotism and devotion with neither complaint nor regret, which makes me feel that the common people are the greatest and happiness is generated through hard work.

Comrades, friends, ladies and gentlemen!

2018 marks the beginning of China putting into action the guiding principles of the 19th CPC National Congress, which designed a blueprint for the country’s development for the next three decades. "A nine-storey tower begins with a pile of earth." To translate the blueprint into reality, we must neither rush upon fantasy nor be guided by the sound of falsehood. We shall work steadily and in a down-to-earth manner.

2018 marks the 40th anniversary of China’s reform and opening up policy. The policy is the only way for modern China to make progress in its development as well as to realize the Chinese dream. With the 40th anniversary of the reform and opening up policy as a turning point, we shall cut paths through mountains and build bridges across rivers, overcome all difficulties and carry reform through to the end.

It is our solemn commitment to lift all rural residents living below the current poverty line out of poverty by 2020. Once made, a promise is as weighty as a thousand ounces of gold. It is only 3 years left before 2020, so the whole society shall take joint actions, strive to the best of our capabilities, and implement targeted measures for more success. If we win the battle against poverty three years later on schedule, that will mark the first entire elimination of absolute impoverishment in the Chinese nation's history which has lasted for thousands of years. Let’s work together for this great achievement that is significant to both the Chinese nation and mankind.

At present, various sides have both expectations and worries about the prospect of peace and development for mankind, looking forward to China expressing its stand and attitude. The world is one big family. As a responsible major country, China has this to say: China will resolutely uphold the authority and status of the United Nations, conscientiously perform its due international obligations and responsibilities, keep its promises on global climate change, actively push forward the implementation of the Belt and Road Initiative, and always contribute to the building of world peace and global development, and the safeguarding of international order. The Chinese people are willing to work together with people of various countries in opening up a beautiful future of greater prosperity and tranquility for mankind.

Comrades, friends, ladies and gentlemen!

Our great development achievements have been made by the people, and should be shared by the people. I understand what concerns the people the most includes education, employment, income, social security, healthcare, elderly care, housing, and the environment. You have reaped the harvest from your hard work. You have also encountered quite some frustrations. There is still much room for improvement with regard to our work in relation to the people’s livelihood. So we should strengthen our sense of mission and responsibility, and do practical and fruitful work for the sake of the people’s welfare. The CPC committees, governments and officials at all levels shall always take into consideration the safety and necessities of the people wholeheartedly, and regard the work of benefiting the people as their top political achievement. They shall pay attention to and share the concerns of the people and create conditions for them to live a better and happier life.

Thank you all.

CHINA FOCUS: SENIOR OFFICIAL STRESSES IMPORTANCE OF XI’S SECOND BOOK ON GOVERNANCE

Beijing, Nov. 24 (Xinhua) — A senior official said on Friday that studying President Xi Jinping’s new book on governance will deepen the understanding of the 19th National Congress of the Communist Party of China (CPC) and Xi Jinping Thought on Socialism with Chinese Characteristics for a New Era.

Wang Huning, member of the Standing Committee of the Political Bureau of the CPC Central Committee, made the remarks at a symposium on the second volume of “Xi Jinping: The Governance of China,” which was published earlier this month.

The first volume was published in 2014 and received widespread attention and praise from readers at home and abroad.

The second volume, covering 17 topics, collects 99 of Xi’s speeches, conversations, instructions and letters between Aug. 18, 2014 and Sept. 29, 2017.

KEY CPC DEPARTMENTS CALL FOR LEARNING XI’S SECOND BOOK ON GOVERNANCE

Beijing -- All regions and departments across China should study President Xi Jinping's new book on governance, according to a notice released by the General Office of the Communist Party of China (CPC) Central Committee.

The second volume of "Xi Jinping: The Governance of China" was published earlier this month.

The notice by the General Office of the CPC Central Committee on forwarding the opinions of publicity and organization departments of the CPC Central Committee regarding studying Xi's new book was released recently.

Over the three years since the publication of the first volume in September 2014, Xi, who is also general secretary of the CPC Central Committee, has continued to put forward new concepts, thoughts and strategies, enriching CPC theories, the notice said.

The second volume, which has 17 topics, collects 99 of Xi's speeches, conversations, instructions and letters between Aug. 18, 2014 and Sept. 29, 2017.

It depicts the practice of the CPC Central Committee, with Xi at the core, in uniting and leading Chinese people to uphold and develop socialism with Chinese characteristics in a new era, the notice said.

The new volume also reflects the development and main contents of Xi Jinping Thought on Socialism with Chinese Characteristics for a New Era.

It is a major political task of the whole Party to study and carry out Xi Jinping Thought on Socialism with Chinese Characteristics for a New Era at present and for the next period, the notice noted.

It also urged Party organizations at all levels to study the first and second volumes so as to understand Xi Jinping Thought on Socialism with Chinese Characteristics for a New Era and better implement the new thought.

Studying of the new book should also be included in training at Party schools and Party committees at all levels, executive leadership academies and academies of governance, the notice stressed.

NEW BOOK SHOWS GLOBAL AUDIENCE CHINA THROUGH XI’S EYES

Beijing, Nov. 22 (Xinhua) -- Inside a spacious factory building in the southern outskirts of Beijing, printing machines have been roaring and running around the clock for two weeks to publish a new book by Chinese President Xi Jinping.

"About 500 of us workers have been working extra hours since Nov. 4," said Zhao Qing, an employee at Beijing Shengtong Printing.

The company was contracted to print 1 million copies of the second volume of "Xi Jinping: The Governance of China," a collection of 99 of Xi’s speeches, conversations, instructions and letters, as well as 29 photos of the Chinese leader from between Aug. 18, 2014 and Sept. 29, 2017.

Since the Chinese and English versions of the book hit the market on Nov. 7, major bookstores in Beijing, including those in the city's busiest shopping areas of Wangfujing and Xidan, have displayed them prominently.

"The first print run is about 5.46 million copies," said Xu Bu, president and chief editor of Foreign Languages Press, the book's publisher. "In the past few days, orders have flooded in and we expect more to come."

Sales are likely to exceed those of the first book, which was published in September 2014 and has sold about 6.6 million copies worldwide in 24 languages.

In addition to Chinese, English, French, German, Japanese, Arabic, Spanish, Russian and Portuguese versions from the Chinese publisher, another 15 languages versions of the first book were translated and published by local publishing houses, with Chinese editors supervising the final draft.

Cooperation with local publishers helped make the book suitable for diverse cultures and traditions, Xu said.

"Such a global promotion plan is rare for books by Chinese leaders. The second volume will follow suit," he said.

According to Xu, Foreign Languages Press has worked with international publishing house Lagardere Services to distribute the book through bookshops at major international airports and will promote it through Chinese embassies and other Chinese organizations abroad.

"We would also like to attract foreign readers who live in China or travel here," he added.

Although they have the same title and almost identical covers, the second volume comes at a different time -- "a new era."

For David Ferguson, English editor of both books with Foreign Languages Press, the fundamental difference is that the second volume has been brought under a single overarching philosophy: Xi Jinping Thought on Socialism with Chinese Characteristics for a New Era.

"Western audience sometimes do not quite understand how important aphorisms and axioms are in Chinese political discourse," he said. "When a Chinese leader comes up with a new idea, it matters to everybody in the Party and the wider society."

Citing the subtle difference between "for a new era" and "in a new era," Ferguson said that the former suggests China is in control, while the latter indicates that it is reacting to something imposed by Robert Lawrence Kuhn, U.S. expert on China studies and chairman of the Kuhn Foundation, shared Ferguson's observation about China's political discourse, noting that articulation between theory and practice in China is greater than other major countries.

"A founding theory of the Party is needed to develop certain specific policies that emerge out of it," he said.

The two books by Xi have offered outsiders a resource to understand China's new guiding philosophy.

"Within the books, you can see the historical development of Xi's idea," Kuhn said. "You can see it inducing itself as these ideas come together, building up to what has been crystallized as Xi Jinping Thought on Socialism with Chinese Characteristics for a New Era."

The two books give readers "a rich exemplification" of the specific elements that compose the thought, Kuhn added.

"The new book is not only well received by our institutional clients but by many ordinary readers," said Xu Jin, employee at the Beijing Xidan Book Building.

"I am touched by General Secretary Xi Jinping's words in this book. I find some of his expressions appealing, and the language he uses is charming, gentle and approachable," a college student surnamed Lyu told Xinhua at the Xidan bookstore.

Although the two books are mostly collections of Xi's speeches and written instructions, they are organized by topic and include only the most important articles or the most essential excerpts, with footnotes helping foreign readers to understand the cultural context, according to editors.

"The main reason why foreigners should read these books is that they are the first time that a Chinese leader has sought to capture his whole philosophy and communicate it to the international audience in so many languages," Ferguson said. "There is everything you need to know about where China is now and where China is trying to go."

Both countries should stick to peacefully solving disputes through dialogue, actively promote the settlement of international and regional hotspot issues, and cope with climate change, terrorism, cyber security and other global challenges through cooperation, so as to safeguard world peace and stability as well as build a community with a shared future for mankind hand in hand.

Emmanuel Macron expressed that he is very glad to come to China for his first visit in 2018 and become the first head of state of a European Union (EU) country to visit China after the 19th CPC National Congress, which fully reflects the importance of France-China relations to both sides. France-China relations are of great significance. As permanent members of the UN Security Council, both countries shoulder major responsibilities for international collective security. Sharing similar ideas in multilateral affairs, France and China have maintained close communication and coordination, and carried out sound cooperation on such major issues as coping with climate change and promoting stable development of globalization. France attaches importance to strengthening bilateral cooperation under the "Belt and Road" framework, and believes that is of high strategic significance. It is hoped that, through this visit, both sides could establish closer communication and dialogue at high level and in various fields, enhance bilateral economic contacts and cooperation in aviation and aerospace, nuclear energy and other important areas, and strengthen educational and cultural exchanges, so as to jointly write a new chapter for France-China cooperation. China would continue implementing the concept of innovative, coordinated, green, open and shared development, stick to the basic state policy of opening-up, adhere to high-quality development, and develop an open economy at a higher level. China stands ready to, together with France and Europe, uphold the concept of mutual understanding and win-win cooperation, stick to the general direction of two-way opening-up, and join hands to improve the global economic governance system which takes opening-up as orientation, cooperation as impetus and sharing as goal.

Li Keqiang expressed that the LMC is the first and a new type of sub-regional cooperation mechanism jointly established by the six countries along the Lancang-Mekong River and an important platform for extensive consultation and joint construction of the "Belt and Road". Over the past two years, as we have upheld the cooperation concepts featuring development first, equal consultation, practicality and high efficiency as well as openness and inclusiveness, the LMC mechanism has produced better-than-expected progress. We forged the LMC pattern featuring leaders' guidance, all-round coverage and broad participation, created the LMC speed of daily progress, monthly results and yearly updates as well as cultivated the LMC culture featuring equal treatment, sincere mutual assistance and family-like atmosphere.

Li Keqiang pointed out that the LMC has become one of the most dynamic and productive cooperation mechanisms in the region. China is willing to work with the countries along the Mekong River to forge the economic development belt along the Lancang-Mekong River basin and build a Lancang-Mekong community of shared future. Li Keqiang put forward the following proposals regarding advancing the LMC from the nurturing period to the growth period in a smooth manner and forging a model of sub-regional and South-South cooperation.

First, well implement water resource cooperation. The six countries must trust, understand and support each other, strengthen upstream and downstream cooperation, accommodate each other's concern, and properly handle the relations between economic development and environmental protection in a coordinated way. With the focus on sustainable utilization of water resources, we must map out a "five-year action plan for water resource cooperation", enhance emergency management on droughts and floods, carry out joint researches on water resources and influence of climate change, improve water quality monitoring system and forge a water resource cooperation platform featuring joint construction and shared benefits.

Second, reinforce production capacity cooperation in such areas as the construction of water conservancy facilities. China boasts cost-effective hydroelectric power equipment as well as engineering construction force, which suit the needs of the countries along the Mekong River. China encourages its companies to, in line with the concept of sustainable development, participate in the construction of hydropower stations, reservoirs, irrigation and drinking-water projects in the countries along the Mekong River so as to achieve win-win cooperation. The six countries must well implement the Joint Statement on Production Capacity Cooperation Among Lancang-Mekong Countries, make plans for connectivity among Lancang-Mekong countries and action plans for production capacity cooperation among Lancang-Mekong countries, and well build the existing economic and trade cooperation zones and cross-border economic cooperation zones.

Third, expand agricultural cooperation. China supports its enterprises in carrying out cooperation in the deep processing of agricultural products in the countries along the Mekong River and jointly developing third-party markets. China is willing to, together with the countries along the Mekong River, deepen cooperation in agricultural technology and build platforms for agricultural technology exchanges, joint research as well as investment and trade cooperation.

Fourth, upgrade human resource cooperation. China is willing to help the countries along the Mekong River nurture more professionals at all levels that are desperately needed for development. China will offer short-term training and in-service education for 2,000 people for the countries along the Mekong River and 100 four-year scholarships for undergraduates in 2018. China encourages joint training programs among universities and promotes cooperation among vocational schools.

Fifth, push forward medical and health cooperation. China is willing to set up joint prevention and control mechanisms for infectious diseases with relevant countries, carry out cross-border joint prevention and control projects for infectious diseases in an in-depth way, and build a Lancang-Mekong network for malaria elimination, so as to effectively safeguard health security in this region. China will assist relevant countries in building medical health system.

Li Keqiang suggested that the six member countries should, on the basis of consolidating the "3+5 cooperation framework", expand cooperation in such areas as digital economy, environmental protection, health, customs and youth, so as to gradually form "3+5+X cooperation framework". China's development benefits from a sound surrounding environment and also serves as a source of driving force and a stabilizer for the economic growth of neighboring countries. The 19th National Congress of the Communist Party of China convened not long ago stressed that China will follow a peaceful development path and promote the building of a community with a shared future for mankind. China's development will definitely bring the earliest and most benefits to the neighboring countries, especially to the countries along the Mekong River. China is willing to take joint actions with relevant countries to cultivate the seedling of the LMC into a towering tree and open up a brighter future for sub-regional cooperation. As the meeting is held in Phnom Penh, it is believed that our cooperation results in the future will be definitely shining as gold.

Leaders present at the meeting praised that the proposals put forward by Premier Li Keqiang suit the long-term interests of the countries along the Mekong River, thanked China's support and assistance to the development of the five countries and believed that the LMC mechanism, though established not long ago, has yielded fruitful results and showcased a broad cooperation prospect featuring good-neighborliness and friendliness as well as mutual benefit and win-win results. With the political willingness to reinforce cooperation and economic complementary advantages, the five countries stand ready to accelerate the LMC to constantly grow from strength to strength as well as enhance cooperation in such fields as water resources, connectivity, agriculture and people-to-people and cultural engagement, in a bid to boost peace, stability and sustainable development of the region.

The Five-Year Plan of Action of the Lancang-Mekong Cooperation (2018-2022) and the Phnom Penh Declaration of the Second Lancang-Mekong Cooperation Leaders' Meeting were issued at the meeting.

After the meeting, Li Keqiang and leaders of other countries jointly attended the handover ceremony of the succession of Laos as the next co-chair of the LMC.

Cambodia thanks China for its long-term and firm support and assistance to the country and wishes the Chinese people to realize the "Two Centenary Goals" at an early date. Cambodia is satisfied with the progress of major projects in highways, ports and construction of special economic zones of the two countries and stands ready to further expand cooperation in infrastructure, agriculture, tourism and people's livelihood. It is the Cambodian government and people's consensus to consolidate and develop Cambodia-China friendship. The Cambodian side will continue firmly supporting China's legitimate stance on the issues concerning China's core interests. Mr. Amitabh Kant, CEO of NITI Aayog,
Shri Tarun Vijay, Chairman of CII India-China Parliamentary Group
Mr. He Yafei, Former Vice Foreign Minister of China,
Friends, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Namaste!

It's my great pleasure to be here to share my thoughts on China-India relations. I agree with what Mr. Vijay, Mr. Kant and Mr. He Yafei have said. We attach great importance to the China-India relations as well as today's function.

As I know, Shri. Tarun Vajay, and CII have shown their strong interest in promoting China-India economic and people-to-people relations for a long time. You've done a great job to organize today's seminar. This is the very first function in the New Year I have attended. I really appreciate your efforts.

In the year of 2017, tremendous changes took place in China. China's GDP reached 12.3 trillion USD, with per capita GDP reaching 9000 USD. More that 10 million rural people were lifted out of poverty. In particular, the 19th National Congress of Communist Party of China was successfully concluded in Beijing, during which the CPC Constitution was amended to include Xi Jinping Thought on Socialism with Chinese Characteristics for a New Era as a new component of the Party's guide for action. The 19th National Congress also outlines Chinese diplomacy in the new era to promote the construction of a community of shared future for mankind and a new type of international relations.

In the year of 2017, the China-India relations also witnessed remarkable progress. The two-way trade volume reached 69 billion USD from January to October. The two-way personnel exchanges reached 1 million. Of course, we also handled the Doklam incident in a mature manner. We should draw lessons from it and prevent it from happening again.

Last September, President Xi and Prime Minister Modi met in Xiamen, and agreed to turn the page and look forward. They set the direction for bilateral relations and the guideline for future cooperation between two countries.

You may have taken note that Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi, and the new member of Political Bureau of the CPC and State Councilor Yang Jiechi, visited India within ten days last month. The main purpose of the visits is to implement the importance consensus reached by our leaders in Xiamen.

During their visits, they had in-depth discussions with their Indian counterparts, called on Indian President and Prime Minister respectively. Both sides agree that the China-India relationship should be comprehensive, enduring and strategic in nature. China and India should treat each other as opportunity and partners, rather than challenges and opponents, so as to allow the Dragon and the Elephant dance together, and make One plus One Eleven.

On future cooperation, I would like to highlight the following points:

First, we should deepen economic cooperation. We are both developing countries with reform and opening up as our national policies. China is talking about Chinese Dream and Two Centenary Goals. In the following three years, China will focus on poverty-elimination and environmental protection. Our Indian friends are talking about the New India and Make in India. We should exchange and share our experiences in governance.

In the past few years, we have reached lots of consensuses on promoting economic cooperation on high-speed railway, industrial parks and smart cities. We should implement these consensuses.

More than 500 Chinese companies are doing business in India. The Chinese side will continue to encourage more Chinese companies to invest in India. We hope and believe that Indian's business environment would become easier and more friendly.

Secondly, we should strengthen the exchanges of media and culture. Media plays a very important role in helping people know each other. China-India Media Summit should be held as soon as possible. More and more India journalists are visiting China. Last year, the Indian movie Dangal got a nice box office in China. President Xi mentioned this movie twice when meeting with Prime Minister Modi. Yoga is very popular in China. These all could add more color to the long-standing cultural relations between our two countries.

Thirdly, we should strengthen communication and coordination on international and regional affairs of mutual interests. Against the backdrop of the waves of anti-free trade, anti-globalization, protectionism and populism, China and India share common positions on many international and regional issues. We could work together in the areas of climate change, counter-terrorism and connectivity.

Fourthly, we should deal with differences properly. Frankly, China and India have boundary issues as well as other differences. Despite these differences, we should strengthen strategic communication through dialogues and consultations at different levels. By this way, we could further foster mutual trust.

Fifthly, we should set some long-term visions for the China-India relations. As I mentioned on many occasion, we can consider negotiating Treaty of Good-Neighborliness and Friendly Cooperation between China and India, restarting the negotiations of China-India Free Trade Agreement, striving for early harvests on boundary issues, and actively exploring the strategic synergy between China's Belt and Road Initiative and India's Act East Policy.

Friends, I firmly believe that China-India relations will have a new look with bright future in the New Year. I have expectations for it and I have faith in it.

Thank you all.
NEW VISTAS FOR INDIA-CHINA ECONOMIC AND TRADE PARTNERSHIP

Mr Li Baijun, Economic and Commercial Counsellor of Chinese Embassy in India

The 19th National Congress of the Communist Party of China concluded in October. In the meeting, Comrade Xi Jinping, General Secretary of the CPC Central Committee and President of the People’s Republic of China (PRC), reviewed the achievements of the past 5 years and charted a new course for China’s future political, economic, cultural and social development. Moreover, President Xi’s report pointed out the right direction for developing China-India economic and trade relationship. In the future, following the principles of the 19th National Congress of the Communist Party of China, we will use three “keys” to unlock the potential of the inseparable, balanced and mutually beneficial India-China economic and trade cooperation in the “new era”.

Li Baijun, Economic and Commercial Counsellor, Embassy of China, Delhi
The 19th National Congress of the Communist Party of China was concluded in October. In the meeting, Comrade Xi Jinping, General Secretary of the CPC Central Committee and President of the People's Republic of China (PRC), reviewed the achievements of the past 5 years and charted a new course for China's future political, economic, cultural and social development. Moreover, President Xi's report pointed out the right direction for developing China-India economic and trade relationship. In the future, following the principles of the 19th National Congress of the Communist Party of China, we will use three "keys" to unlock the potential of the inseparable, balanced and mutually beneficial China India economic and trade cooperation in the "new era".

First, build key relationships- to become trading partners based on equality and mutual benefit. As mentioned in the report of the 19th CPC National Congress, China remains firm in its commitment to building a community with a shared future for mankind and forging a new form of international relations featuring mutual respect, fairness, justice, and win-win cooperation. This is the principles China adheres to in attaining peaceful development and participating global governance. China and India are good neighbors, friends and trading partners. Since 2014, after President Xi visited India, the two leaders have met more than 10 times on various occasions, reached important consensus and charted the right direction for China-India economic and trade cooperation. In the BRICS Xiamen Summit this September, President Xi stressed the importance of "the dragon and elephant dancing together" and avoiding conflicts. Prime Minister Modi also emphasized that with good bilateral relationship, 1 plus 1 could equal 11. To achieve this, we should further our practical cooperation, utilize intergovernmental and intercorporate cooperation mechanisms to improve our economic strength and competitiveness.

With the economic and trade mechanisms like JEG, SED and China-India Financial Dialogue playing more important roles, our strategic synergy will be enhanced, trade and investment will be facilitated, bilateral trade will be more balanced and massive project cooperation will be more active. All these will lead to a spectacular future for our economic development. Meanwhile, we should also strengthen our cooperation and coordination in WTO, RCEP and other multilateral mechanisms to promote globalization and protect the overall interests of developing countries and foster more inclusive, equal and mutually beneficial economic and trade relations.

Second, focus on key issues- to build a more balanced trade structure. It is stressed in the 19th CPC National Congress that China would pursue open, innovative, and inclusive development that benefits all, that China would not close its door to the world but would only become more open. For a long time, the imbalanced trade between China and India has been a stubborn obstacle holding back our economic and trade relations. I'm very happy to see that with joint efforts from both sides, our trade volume may exceed 80 billion dollars this year, reaching a 5 year high. More importantly, China's import from India has increased more than 20% while export to India remains nearly the same.

In 2018, China will host the first China International Import Exposition. This is the first large scale import themed exposition and an innovation in international trade development. We welcome the Indian businesses to showcase Indian products in the event along with goods from all over the world. We believe this will open new channels for Indian goods entering Chinese families. We will work on expanding our cross-border trade, import more agricultural products from India, and promote build-to-order business models. We hope to finish FTA to enhance the level and scale of our trade, increase our import from India, opening our market wider and achieve more balanced trade with India.

Third, develop key areas-to build a mutually beneficial investment system. As emphasized in the 19th CPC National Congress report, China would give equal importance to "bringing in" and "going global," following the principle of achieving shared growth through discussion and collaboration; and be more open and cooperative to enhance innovation capacity. With these efforts, we hope to break new grounds in opening China further through links running eastward and westward, across land and over sea. China has always made out-bound investments with the belief of creating mutual benefits. As statistics show, from 2012 to 2016, Chinese corporations have paid more than 13.7 million USD in taxes, created over 1 million jobs, and made contributions to host nations and the world economy. In recent years, many economic and trade agreements in industrial park and cooperation on production capacity have been signed between China and India, establishing great platforms for investment cooperation. A group of famous Chinese corporations like Alibaba, Fosun, SAIC Motor, China Fortune Land Development have come to invest in India. These corporations not only provided funding and technical support for "Make in India" and "Start-up India", reduced trade deficit between the two countries, but also provided jobs and tax revenue for their host states. They are highly recognized by the state governments. On November 16th, I attended the Haier's Industrial Park?Pune?Inaugural Ceremony. During the event, I had an in-depth discussion with Shri Devendra Fadnavis, Chief Minister of Maharashtra. He praised the progress Haier has made in Maharashtra and called it a great epitome of foreign enterprises participating "Make in India".

This year, in World Bank's ease of doing business index, India's ranking jumped from 130th to 100th, making one of the biggest improvements among all the countries. This will further encourage Indian corporations to invest more in India. Riding on this trend, we should work harder to optimize investment environment, push forward the revision of bilateral agreements like investment protection agreement and agreement for the avoidance of double taxation. This will create a better investment environment for corporations, regulate Chinese corporation's investment in India and realize the social responsibilities of the corporations. Moreover, we should encourage Indian corporations to invest in China in areas with comparative advantages, like Pharmacy and IT. In this way, we can create a friendly, complementary and mutually beneficial two-way investment system.

As a ancient Chinese poem goes, a thousand sails pass by the shipwreck, ten thousand saplings shoot up beyond the withered tree--new things come to the fore while old things perish. As H.E. Ambassador Luo Zhaohui said time and time again, China-India relations cannot afford to wander, stall or go backwards. We need to move in the right direction and implement the consensus our leaders reached in Xiamen Summit. We should focus on cooperation instead of differences, solve problems to create a more healthy bilateral relationship. I believe, with the guidance of our leaders and the guiding principles of the 19th National Congress of the Communist Party of China, China and India economic and trade cooperation will bring real benefits to our governments, business communities and ordinary people. It will become the bedrock and thruster of our bilateral relationship. With the development of this relationship, the day when "China and India speak in one voice, and the world listens" will come soon.

NEW YEAR ELEMENTS IN CHINA’S TRADITIONAL CULTURE

Recently, China issued a set of zodiac stamps to celebrate the upcoming Chinese Lunar New Year of the Dog.

The theme for this round of zodiac stamps is "happy family," and the new stamps depict Chinese domestic dogs.

The year 2018 marks Chinese "Wu Xu Year," the Year of the Dog.

In fact, not only zodiac stamps, elements of Chinese New Year can be found in many forms of Chinese folk arts.

Zodiac stamps for Year of the Dog

China Post says the first stamp depicts a male dog with its chin up and its eyes straight ahead. Its two ears point upward, while its hind legs are forcefully thrust against the ground, ready to pounce on any intruders.

The second stamp shows a brown bitch lovingly gazing at its puppy. The black puppy holds its head up high and tries to stand straight. The mother and the puppy stand side by side, demonstrating maternal love.

The two stamps are connected, signifying a peaceful, harmonious family, and a prosperous, flourishing nation.

New Year Painting is a unique art form in Chinese folk culture, which is used to decorate doors, walls and windows on the Chinese New Year to invite heavenly blessings.

The art of paper-cutting in China may date back to the second century AD, since paper was invented by Cai Lun in the Eastern Han Dynasty(25-220 AD) in China. As paper became more affordable, paper-cutting became one of the most important of Chinese folk arts.

Usually, the artworks are made of red paper, as red is associated with festivities and happiness in Chinese culture, but other colors are also used. They often appear at Spring Festival, weddings and childbirth, and always symbolize luck and happiness.

It is a tradition for Chinese to paste couplets on walls to solicit good luck during the Spring Festival.

INCOME OF FARMERS AND HERDSMEN IN TIBET REACHES RECORD HIGH
The disposable income of farmers and herdsmen in southwest China's Tibet Autonomous Region in 2017 reached a record 10,367 yuan (1,595 US dollars) per capita, an increase of 14% over the same period of previous year and much higher than the growth of the region's GDP and income of urban residents in the same period.

Suffering from the high altitude and extreme cold weather, infrastructure in Tibet's rural and pastoral areas are poor and income of farmers and herdsmen was only 5,697 yuan (876 US dollars) per capita by the end of 2012.

Since 2012, the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China (CPC) has provided a series of preferential policies to vigorously improve production and living conditions in rural and pastoral areas and livelihood of people in Tibet. The income of farmers and herdsmen has enjoyed double-digit high growth.

Also, the number of poverty-striven people in rural and pastoral areas in the region has dropped from 1,030,000 in the end of 2012 to 479,000 today.

Last year, Tibet saw 140,000 people escape out of poverty.
OLDEST BUDDHIST STELE DISCOVERED IN TIBET

Lhasa, Jan. 8 (Xinhua) -- Archeologists in Tibet Autonomous Region believe the ninth century Purang stele to be the oldest in the region.

Shargan Wangdue, of Tibet Cultural Relics Protection Institute, said the stele was discovered in Ngari prefecture in northern part of the Tibet Autonomous Region.

The stele is 1.85 meters tall, inscribed with the image of a standing buddha.

On its left side are 24 lines of old Tibetan language. On its right side are 19 lines of buddhist prayers.

Shargan Wangdue said most scholars agree that the stele was set up in 826 or 838, during the period of Tubo kingdom.

"This stele shows Buddhism was already being practiced during the Tubo period in western part of Ngari," Shargan Wangdue said.

MOUNTAIN WARDEN’S NEW YEAR IN HOH XIL

On Monday, Chuenpen Tashi, a mountain guide, celebrated New Year’s Day in Hoh Xil, high in the Tibetan Autonomous Prefecture of Yushu in northwest China's Qinghai Province.

It was Tashi's first New Year in Hoh Xil since it became a World Heritage Site last year. The name Hoh Xil means "beautiful young woman, blue mountain" in Mongolian.

"The past years were just like a dream to me, and the once bloody Hoh Xil has now entered the best of times," said Tashi, 35. "The year 2018 will be a new beginning, and as a warden here, I will try my best to protect the clean soil under my feet."

The area listed by the UNESCO covers some 6 million hectares at an average altitude of over 4,600 meters, making it an ideal habitat for Tibetan antelope.

Years of care have allowed the wild animal populations to grow, but also brought hardships for Tashi’s family. In 1994, his uncle was killed by poachers, and four years later, his father died while patrolling the mountain.

Over 70 people work Hoh Xil National Nature Reserve and over 90 percent of them are Tibetan.

In the 1980s, Hoh Xil was plagued by poachers who hunted Tibetan antelopes for their hides, which were made into shahtoosh shawls.

"During the craziest period, poachers drove trucks into Hol Xil, and slaughtered wild animals," said Luo Yanhai, deputy head of the forestry police bureau. "Wild animals were skinned and their bodies discarded everywhere.”
At the end of the 20th century, the number of Tibetan antelope in Hoh Xil had decreased from more than 200,000 to less than 20,000.

“In the past, the budget was tight, so when we patrolled, we lived in tents and lit candles,” said Tashi. "The tents were often attacked by bears.”

During the arduous patrols, the patrollers ate instant noodles and pancakes. Due to the high altitude, they had to use pressure cookers to cook the noodles.

"In winter, we would take high-calorie food like butter, but due to the cold, they froze easily," Tashi recalled.

“Daily patrols are our routine,” he said.

The population of the Tibetan antelope has increased and Hoh Xil currently has more than 60,000 antelopes.

Lhasa, Dec. 25 (Xinhua) -- The grassland coverage in Tibet Autonomous Region has been increasing, said the regional agricultural department.

The natural grassland coverage rate in 2017 was around 45.2 percent, up 2.5 percentage points from the figure in 2010, the regional agricultural and herding department said.

Herding has been banned on 8.6 million hectares of grassland in Tibet, about 10 percent of the total area of natural grassland in the region. The ban was introduced to tackle problems of degradation and grassland retreat.

Last year, a total of 3.2 billion yuan (about 480 million U.S. dollars) was used to pay local herders to protect the grassland and limit herding. This year, the central government allocated 3.26 billion yuan to compensate the herders.

The number of cattle is limited to 18 million, down from 23 million in 2010, said Xiao Changwei, deputy director of the department.
